

Water tower in Śrem

The water tower is the most recognizable building on Śrem's skyline. It was built in 1909 and it goes up nearly 44 meters. It was designed to resemble Gothic wall towers.

Inside, there is a tank with 240 cubic meters capacity, which holds the construction of the roof. In the night scenery the tower is a particularly impressive sight, as it is beautifully lit. It is believed that where the tower now stands, up until the 17th century, there was the St. Nicholas Church - the first temple in the city.
